5 Snapchat photos you should def keep sending

The Social Media Pessimist
» sely@redeyechicago.com
» @theseanwow

What a concept. A messaging application through which you can send friends—and, well, really anyone you technically want—photos, videos and drawings that disappear in as little as one second and as much as 24 hours.

This is where we're at, people. This is the most fascinating thing in our pathetic, meaningless lives: an unnecessary shred of reality called "Snapchat" that resides on our mobile devices. If we're out, or something at all happens in our lives, we have to document it for our "friends" in a Snapchat story.

Boy, are we pathetic.

Let's not get into why we're probably the most distracted, unappreciative generation ever created. Let's focus on what Snapchat users are doing right.

I call these the five Snapchat photos you should definitely keep sending:

The On-The-Toilet Special

What's a trip to the bathroom without your closest companion: your cellphone. Some people peruse Twitter or various news sites while pushing out yesterday's Mexican fiesta. But you? You're a creator. You're an innovator. Snaps of your pants at your ankles or your facial expression while on the toilet really showcase who you are as a person. And that identity? It's that of a [bleep]ing loser. Keep doing you, Archimedes.

The Gym Selfie in the Mirror

You work out. Well, let me rephrase that. You stand near the rack of dumbbells inside a fitness center every once in a while. There's still no evidence you've actually ever done a single rep of anything, but your Snapchat game is on point. A quick flex or a sly glance at the camera as you snap a pic of yourself? Brilliant. Every girl you sent that to? Yeah, her pants just flew off. Get a life, you [bleep]ing toolbox.

The Couch Filterer

Snapchat just released a plethora of new filters that allow you to easily embody a demon, a 97-year-old version of yourself and a rainbow-puking weirdo, among others. But you? You gotta try 'em all ... on your couch after work for three hours without moving an inch. Before you even realize, you have posted nine 10-second videos of yourself as "Stories." Who needs friends when you have ... make believe and a forward-facing camera, I guess?

The 'Hey, Look, I Went to a Concert' Goer

The music just speaks to you. I mean, what other explanation would you have for posting 24 videos of various live songs from a Bruno Mars concert? Your 109th row seats are no match for the insanity that you're passing along to everyone. Horizontal video of "The Lazy Song", "Just the Way You Are" and "When I Was Your Man"? You should be getting paid for this. We're all really impressed with your blurry, cellphone shots. Keep 'em coming.

The 'This Is What I'm Currently Holding' User

When you're holding a Starbucks latte? Or tickets to a Broadway show? Or, like, your friend's baby? Photos must follow. Because, hey ... you're insecure. And you need to show people that your life has some figment of a purpose. So point the camera at your hand and ... snap. That's currently what you're holding! What a fun life you live every day.

Yep. I'm an asshole. But not as much of an asshole as the people who think their lives are taken seriously by what they post on [bleep]ing Snapchat. What did I leave off this list? Tweet to me @theseanwow and we'll laugh together. Now that's a "story."

COURTESY OF ONE TAIL AT A TIME

Pawsitively good news: Kale Chips close to his goal weight

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

Getting rid of those last few pounds to reach your goal weight can be ruff. Just ask Kale Chips.

The once-overweight beagle is looking slimmer these days. In nine months, he has shed almost half his weight after getting wheeled out on a wagon at 86 pounds when One Tail at a Time rescued him from a shelter in January. His goal weight is now a few pounds within reach.

Because we pawsitively love his story (OK, no more puns), we checked in with Kale Chips and asked him to give us an update. His foster mom Beth Staley of the Happy Dog Barkery in Downers Grove was kind enough to send us his answers.

Anyone interested in giving this lovable boy a forever home can fill out an application at onetail.org.

LVIVANCO@REDEYECHICAGO.COM | @LVIVANCO

My age: 8
My weight: currently 49 pounds
My goal weight: 45ish. I lost 37 pounds so far.
I'm the ideal pet for ... a house with a big fenced yard, neighbors who are tolerant of my noise, no small children, someone who likes to take long walks
How I'd describe my personality: typical hound stubborn, nice guy when you get to know me, aloof but loving
I love ... real kale chips when they are drizzled with coconut oil and liver
My work out routine is ... long walks, chasing squirrels, stretching on tree trunks
Things I like: treats, long walks, being outside. I am starting to like light scratches on my back and tummy. (It doesn't ask this and it doesn't go under things I like, but I mostly ignore the house cat and store foster kittens.)
Things I don't like: small children (they make me nervous), thunderstorms (I hide in a closet), big male dogs (but I would be fine after a while)
My favorite treat: liver-flavored anything
My best friend is ... Gracie, my foster sister
I like to chase ... squirrels, chipmunks and while I've never seen a bunny, my foster mom says I would chase them too. I also chased a skunk, caught it and I still stink when I get wet.
I like to bark at ... squirrels, any critter scent on the ground, other dogs while on a walk, when I go outside because I am so happy to be able to go outside
My favorite toy is ... I am not a big toy guy, but I'll play with them when I am being silly.
I like to curl up and take a nap ... in one of the many comfy beds in the house or when I get to work after a full morning of squirrel chasing.

RESTLESS IN SEATTLE

AND SCORELESS. AND WINLESS. BEARS ARE MAKING CHICAGO 😞

RedEye

It's only Week 3 of the NFL season, and already words are feeling insufficient to describe the 💔 Bears fans are suffering.

Coach John 🐴's team tried its best to 🐻⬇️ on Sunday in Seattle. They were trying to avoid their first 0-3 start since 2003; they finished 7-9 that year and coach Dick Jauron was fired after the season. No such 🍀, as they'll have to wait until October to try and claim their first win.

Although no one expects the Bears to make a coaching change this winter, the 2015 season feels like it was flushed down the 🚽 already. The frustration is similar to when your computer crashes, causing you to bang on the keyboard while your vocabulary devolves into unintelligible grunts and noises. Here's what Sunday's game looked like if you were, say, unloading your emotions via your 📱.

FIRST QUARTER

🚑 « No Jay Cutler, no Alshon Jeffery. Uh oh.

😡 « The Bears committed a delay of game penalty on the first play from scrimmage. Teams always talk about preparing for the noise in Seattle, but it seems like it didn't do them any good.

🎱 « Seattle's Michael Bennett (Martellus' brother) put the Bears behind this when he stopped Forte for a 4-yard loss on the Bears' first snap.

😳 « The Bears have their first sack of the season!

🐌 « CBS announcer Phil Simms called the Bears a slow team on offense. He might have been holding back.

😳😳 « Two sacks in one quarter? Who are these Bears?!

Score: Seahawks 3, Bears 0

SECOND QUARTER

📈 « Bears reach midfield for the first time with 10:07 left in the second quarter.

📉 « Bears punt two plays later.

🐔 « You can't say Fox is unafraid to throw the challenge flag. Too bad it worked only once.

WEEK 3

« Believe it or not, both defenses were swarming in the first half, as one could tell by the lack of points.

« Defensive lineman Will Sutton left the game in the second quarter with an apparent hand injury, leaving the Bears even more shorthanded. Just great.

« How the Bears used Matt Forte in the first quarter, when he racked up 15 carries for 64 yards.

Score: Seahawks 6, Bears 0

THIRD QUARTER

« Tyler Lockett takes the opening kickoff of the second half back 105 yards for a touchdown. Dude was never even touched.

« Marshawn Lynch left the game with an injury Bears fans know all too well. (See what we did there?)

« Pernell McPhee collected sacks on back-to-back plays. Finally the free-agent pickup is earning his, well, you know.

« Forte gingerly walked off the field on the Bears' final possession of the third quarter. No. Dear God no.

Score: Seahawks 20, Bears 0

FOURTH QUARTER

SOS « SOS SOS SOS SOS SOS

« Yours should be pretty free the rest of the year. Except when the Bulls and Blackhawks play.

Score: Seahawks 26, Bears 0

LagunaPicks

All season, Laguna the Shedd Aquarium sea lion will predict the winner in Bears games. He picked the Seahawks on Sunday, which means he's 2-1. Long season ahead, though. For more information on Laguna and sea lions, visit sheddaquarium.org.

1	Now that the Cubs have clinched a playoff spot ...	... [bleep] just got real. And a lot more nerve-wracking.	... we're gonna party like it's 2008! Wait, what?	... people in Chicago can appropriately start pretending they were fans all along.	... we start our own clenching (of the buttocks) thinking of the wild-card game.	... rest assured hotel rooms in Pittsburgh are already booked up.
2	How much credit does Joe Maddon deserve for the Cubs' success this season?	All the credit. Extra credit.	About as much as Bud Selig does for adding the extra wild-card team to the playoffs. Is he getting a statue?	He is the manager, so I would assume quite a bit of it. What ... does he need to hit a homer now too?	He's heads (a flamingo's) and tails (a sloth's) above every other skipper.	107 years and counting. Give him ALL the credit if it means a World Series title!
3	What one thing do you need to happen during Bulls media day?	Derrick Rose doing his best Harlem Globetrotters trick. Haha, just kidding. DON'T DO THAT.	Jim Rose vs. Joe Cowley in a steel cage match for the right to ask Derrick Rose questions.	Is that a thing? Crossing your fingers for something to happen at a media day? I've never heard that before.	Three Words: Holberg. Dance. Moves.	Michael to come out of retirement. Please? #WhatsAHolberg
4	Any bright side to the Bears season so far? Any at all?	Er ... the supermoon was pretty bright.	I've gotten soooooooo much sleep on Sundays so far. It's heaven.	At least their jerseys are well-made!	The team just sent me a cool tank top, so that's nice.	Tailgating in the South Lot has been at an all-time high. #DeanCallahanMeats. #SausageKing
5	The NFL wants players to help pay for a new stadium in L.A. How much sense does that make?	None, like most other NFL decisions.	Next they'll be asking fans to pay for a license to buy season tickets! What kinda chump would do that? Wait, what?	It's kind of like taxes. And the NFL is kind of like the government. So, I mean, sure?	You want the NFL to make sense? Good luck.	Does anything in L.A. make sense?

Attorney: Kane accuser to cooperate in hoax investigation

An attorney for the woman who accused Blackhawks star Patrick Kane of sexual assault said she will cooperate with the investigation into an alleged hoax that threw the case into chaos.

In a letter released to the Tribune on Saturday, Buffalo, N.Y.-based attorney Roland Cercone denied Erie County District Attorney Frank Sedita's recent suggestions that the woman wouldn't answer questions about the purported hoax. Cercone said the insinuation—made during a news conference Friday—was untrue.

"For the record, no one has asked to speak to the complainant regarding the latest incident," Cercone wrote. "I suspect this is so because their investigation has already revealed that she had no knowledge of—or anything to do with—this entire fiasco. However, should the District Attorney wish to speak with my client, she is ready, willing, and able to cooperate, as she has always done throughout this investigation."

Northwestern football keeps climbing the polls, slowly but surely. The Wildcats were elevated to 16th in the Associated Press rankings after improving to 4-0 by beating Ball State on Saturday. Next up: their Big Ten opener Saturday against Minnesota (3-1), whose only loss is to No. 4 TCU.

Workers and officials stand over a section of charred turf in St. Louis. AP

Gap in coverage

For all the Bears' problems this season, at least they don't have any issues with their field catching fire (yet). The St. Louis Rams cannot say the same after a patch of their artificial turf was set ablaze Sunday by pregame pyrotechnics. The Rams' game against Pittsburgh was delayed 28 minutes while the fire was put out and the area cleaned up.

Cubs vs. Kansas City | 7:05 p.m. CSN

This is a makeup of a game postponed earlier this season. And seeing as both teams are playoff-bound, could this be a preview of that event the Cubs have not been to in seven decades? Notice we're trying to tiptoe around a certain phrase here. For today anyway.

10 THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT TREVOR NOAH BEFORE HIS 'DAILY SHOW' HOSTING DEBUT

By Sean Ely | REDEYE

Whether you religiously watched "The Daily Show," saw a few clips here and there when they popped up on YouTube over the years or somehow have never seen it at all (!), you still know who Jon Stewart is. The legendary talk show host and satire whiz sat behind his Comedy Central desk for 16 years. And he was damn good at his job. (If you don't feel like listening to my take, by the way, the 18 Emmys speak for themselves. Boom.)

But on Monday evening, a baby-faced, 31-year-old comic named Trevor Noah will get cozy in that same chair—well, uh, I actually can't confirm that Stewart left his chair, but you get the point—as he hosts his first episode of "The Daily Show" with guests Kevin Hart and Ryan Adams.

So who is this guy? Where does he come from? Allow me ...

1 At 31, he's five years younger than Jon Stewart was when he took over "The Daily Show" in January 1999.

2 He's from South Africa and was living in Cape Town up until his new gig in New York City. He's the son of a black South African woman and a white Swiss man, who had to secretly live as neighbors in separate apartments in apartheid-era South Africa because the National Party government did not allow interracial relationships. Since early in his life, Noah has experienced and witnessed racism and oppression first-hand.

3 When he was 18, Noah starred in "," a South African soap opera, before hosting his own radio show titled "Noah's Ark" on the most popular youth station in the South African province of Gauteng.

4 Noah said his "big break" in the stand-up comedy world happened in 2007 when he toured as Gabriel Iglesias' opening act.

5 The documentary "You Laugh But It's True" was released in 2011, profiling Noah's difficult upbringing in South Africa and his introduction to the comedy realm. It is currently streaming on Netflix.

6 Noah is the first South African stand-up comedian to ever appear on "The Tonight Show" (Jan. 6, 2012) and the "Late Show with David Letterman" (May 17, 2013).

7 Noah speaks six different languages: English, German, Xhosa, Zulu, Sotho and Afrikaans.

8 When Comedy Central announced that Noah would be the next host of "The Daily Show," the comic's tweets were analyzed and criticized for crude content. The network defended him, saying in a statement, "Like many comedians, Trevor Noah pushes boundaries; he is provocative and spares no one, himself included."

9 Before Noah's last trip to Chicago, when asked about Chicago-style hot dogs, he told RedEye, "I always thought I needed to go to Chicago because of the special hot dogs. It's genuinely just a hot dog. Like we don't get it in South Africa? If that's what you think special food is? The best hot dog? I'd hate to see what your [bleep] hot dogs are."

10 When asked about the weirdest things he's noticed while living in America, Noah told RedEye, "Your portion sizes! Every time I come back I am shocked how much you can buy in one go. It's the most ridiculous thing I've ever seen in my life. They're apocalypse sizes. I bring different friends [here] just so I can see their shocked faces for the first time."

5 QUESTIONS FOR NOAH (WE GUESS THE ANSWERS)

By Sean Ely | REDEYE

Will "correspondents" and "contributors" still be a huge part of "The Daily Show"?
I can't see how that would ever change. "The Daily Show" has made a living bringing in satirically brilliant comics to play "correspondents" and "contributors" on the show. When you've pumped out talent like Stephen Colbert, Ed Helms, John Oliver and Rob Riggle—to name a handful—it would only make sense to keep it going. After all, Noah was one himself.

What about the show's iconic sarcastic stance and overall vibe that Jon Stewart perfected? Will Noah change how the show approaches worldwide issues?
"The Daily Show" must become what Noah is most comfortable delivering night after night. Trying to keep the exact same formula that Stewart concocted would be stupid. Noah told The New York Times last week, "The show will be a representation of my interests, and the interests in the room. We all live in America. But as America is increasingly learning, if a butterfly flaps its wings on the Chinese stock exchange, there's a good chance it affects America."

It's imperative that he starts strong. So how does he plan to do that without much "household name" buzz around him as a comic?
Noah told Rolling Stone last week that his first week of shows will be a four-part miniseries. (Remember, "The Daily Show" airs at 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday every week.) So expect him to try and win you over by not having a filter of any kind and stringing together an intimate storyline so you learn more about him in just four 22-minute episodes. The joy of having a show on Comedy Central? They really let you go for it all. And believe me: Noah will.

Jon Stewart was a phenomenal interviewer. What kind of interviewer is Trevor Noah? Does he have any background in reporting?
Look, Stewart winged it. Comedians wing it ALL. THE. TIME. That's what this business is. You use your instincts and curiosity about the world to turn yourself into a good interviewer. Noah only will continue to get better and find his rhythm. What I hope to see are natural, banter-filled conversations with guests, rather than it feeling like an "interview." Noah will use his charm and quick-wit to make himself stand out.

Stewart always signed off by saying, "And now your moment of Zen" before showing a hilarious clip making some politician or newscaster look stupid. What will be Noah's?
If I'm a betting man, I'd say he'll scrap that idea all together. Like I said, this is Noah's show now. He has been very vocal about how much he adores what Stewart built, but bits have to come naturally. Noah told me on the phone in January, "I don't think it gets better than that" in reference to working with Stewart as a contributor on his show. "If that's the first and last thing I ever do, that's a great thing for me. ... He is so good and loves what he is doing. That's how I feel about comedy. If I can be close to that? It's fantastic." Just two months later, he was asked to host the show. How's that for Zen?

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Do your best to pick up the pieces this week with your partner. A productive conversation is possible.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
Words left unsaid to your partner are likely to be the source of your frustration. Give yourself a pat on the back for wanting to get the dialogue started.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
When it comes to friendship and matters of the heart, do your best to keep things separate. At least until after Oct. 9.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
You'll enjoy more physical pleasures with your mate. Think pillow talk or a soak in the tub together. Give each other a massage or foot rub. Hug.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You and your partner should do your best to respect each other's differences and let go of the need to make yourself right.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
You'll need to pay attention to financial matters this week that involve your partner. It might be helpful to involve a third party in the conversation.

Aries March 21-April 19
A conversation with your partner on Wednesday might bring up old, unresolved issues. Don't run away from the conversation—run towards it.

Taurus April 20-May 20
If you've been keeping your emotions locked up for some reason, you're likely to realize that it's no longer serving you or your relationship.

Gemini May 21-June 21
Changes in your social life might cause more confusion in your love life than you ever thought possible.

Cancer June 22-July 22
You and your mate are long overdue for a few conversations that are likely to make both of you uncomfortable. Consider family or couples counseling.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
Until Oct. 9, you'll continue to go back and forth about several issues connected to your love life. This Wednesday however, you might have a breakthrough.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Your mate has put his or her nose into your personal finances over the past couple of weeks. Discuss what's really behind his or her snide remarks.

THE DIGIT

$47.5M

That's how much "Hotel Transylvania 2" made in the U.S. and Canada over the weekend, making it the biggest September movie opening of all time, according to the L.A. Times. The sequel's surprise success (it was expected to debut at $32 million to $37 million), put it at the top of the box office, ahead of "The Intern" ($18.2 million) and "Maze Runner: The Scorch Trials" ($14 million).

'Big Bang' breakup

Another couple bites the dust. "Big Bang Theory" star Kaley Cuoco (right) and tennis player Ryan Sweeting are ending their marriage, Cuoco's rep told People on Friday. Cuoco and Sweeting were married on New Year's Eve in 2013 after getting engaged in September of that year, following a whirlwind romance. A day after the announcement, the actress was quite literally back in the saddle again. On Saturday, Cuoco posted on Instagram a photo of her new horse Zaza and competed in a horse-jumping event as part of the Flintridge Autumn Classic in California, according to People.

THE QUOTE

"He whispered in my ear that he liked the movie 'Ted.' I told him that was not appropriate for his age. Holy Father, please forgive me."

—Mark Wahlberg, MC-ing the World Meeting of Families festival, which Pope Francis attended in Philadelphia on Saturday night as part of his U.S. visit, according to the AP.

All we want for Christmas ...

... is a new "Sherlock" installment. BBC One's autumn/fall winter trailer features brief new footage from the upcoming Christmas special of the sleuthy series. Though no air date has been officially announced, the term "Christmas special" seems to give the game away, and it likely will air Stateside on PBS around the same time or soon after. The trailer also included clips from BBC America's "Luther" special starring Idris Elba as well as miniseries "The Night Manager," starring Tom Hiddleston and Hugh Laurie, that will air on AMC in the U.S.

Trouble Down Under?

Uh oh. Chris Brown's Australian tour plans are in jeopardy, the AP reports, after the Australian government formally warned the singer that he likely will be denied a visa because of his conviction for assaulting Rihanna in 2009. Brown now has 28 days to prove why he should be allowed into Australia, the country's immigration minister said in a statement.
